204. Statement A: The Internet will inevitably open China by enabling citizens to get information and interact with the rest of the world, despite the Chinese government's best efforts to limit those contacts. Statement B: China will do with the Internet what it has historically done - it will absorb what it wants and reject the rest, and in doing this, with its huge population and economic power, it will change the way the Internet operates.

204. Statement A: The Internet will inevitably open China by enabling citizens to get information and interact with the rest of the world, despite the Chinese government's best efforts to limit those contacts. Statement B: China will do with the Internet what it has historically done - it will absorb what it wants and reject the rest, and in doing this, with its huge population and economic power, it will change the way the Internet operates.
